In epidemiology, risk difference (RD) or excess risk is the difference between the risk of an outcome in the exposed group and the unexposed group. It is computed as $\hat{a} - \hat{a}_0$, where \hat{a} is the incidence in the exposed group, and \hat{a}_0 is the incidence in the unexposed group. If the risk of an outcome is increased by the exposure, the term absolute risk increase (ARI) is used, and computed as $\hat{a} - \hat{a}_0$.
